THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

ADVICE TO INVALIDS.—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, relief from pain and anguish, to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff, to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1880, to J. T. Davenport, Esq., 3 Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. "Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the widespread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to native bazaars, and judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnance, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera, in Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is A DELIBERATE BREACH OF FAITH ON THE PART OF THE CHEMIST TO PRESCRIBER AND PATIENT ALIKE. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, Symes & Co. Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemist."

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that the story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, which he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "The Times," July 13, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

CAUTION:—Beware of Piracy and Imitation. Sole Manufacturer—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell's Stree Bloomsbury, London.

COMPOUND RENAL PILLS

Are a safe and speedy Remedy for the above dangerous complaints, Discharges and Diseases of the Urinary Organs generally, which too frequently harass the sufferer over the best years of life, and end only in an agonising death. For weakness across the loins, sandy or other deposit in the water, and in all cases of renal or urinary disturbance, they are, indeed, unrivalled. They correct acidity of the stomach, and promote the functions of the kidneys, thereby preventing stone in the bladder, &c. Many complaints, long supposed to be nervous, often arise solely from contamination of the blood with certain impurities which should have been carried off by the kidneys. Thousands of testimonials from grateful Patients attest their marvellous efficacy. In packages, 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d.

PILULÆ VITÆ, OR VEGETABLE LIFE PILLS.

The most wonderful Pills in the world for Indigestion, Biliousness, and all Disorders of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels. Their action is mild yet effectual; they do not gripe or purge, and for habitual costiveness, loss of appetite, disturbed sleep, harassing dreams, wind, indigestion, sick headache, furred tongue, unpleasant taste in the mouth on rising in the morning, sallowness, scurvy, pimples, blotches, boils, &c., they are of unexampled efficacy; and being prepared solely from the vegetable kingdom, may be taken by the most delicate of either sex, equally with the robust, merely regulating the dose according to the printed directions accompanying each box.

Those who are subject to occasional attacks of Biliousness instead of resorting to the old-fashioned blue pill and nauseous black draught, will do well to keep a box of these Pills by them, and never leave home without them: an attack may thus be nipped in the bud by taking a dose or two, which, if allowed to run its course for a few days, would probably almost completely prostrate its unhappy victim. Sold in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

WORLD-FAMED
GUTTAE VITAE,
OR LIFE DROPS.

This remarkable rejuvenating essence strengthens the vitality of the whole system, gives energy to the muscles, and speedily restores the impaired powers of life, imparting strength and manly vigour to the most debilitated and worn out constitution. Those who suffer from Premature Decay, or deficiency of the Vital Forces owing to long residence in India, or any other cause, will find this medicine just what they require. Equally adapted for the studious and sedentary; the aged and infirm; the nervous and debilitated; as also for delicate females and weakly children. All sufferers from loss of appetite, nervous headache, lassitude, and despondency—too often accompanied with suicidal thoughts—should make immediate and fair unprejudiced trial of this wonderful medicine, which is daily effecting the most remarkable cures in patients who had been given up by the faculty. In all cases of nervous and functional debility (arising from whatever cause), it is truly unrivalled. To married persons especially, this preparation will prove invaluable, giving strength and vigour in place of lassitude and incapacity.—Price 11s., or four times that quantity, 33s. per bottle.

Dr. De Roos' Medicines are sold by all the Principal Chemists and Merchants in India. Purchasers are particularly requested to see that every package bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "WALTER DE ROOS, LONDON," impressed thereon in white letters on a red ground, and refuse worthless imitations frequently put forward by unscrupulous vendors for the sale of extra profit.

DIAMOND MERCHANTS,
73, ESPLANADE ROAD, BOMBAY.

IN order to still further add to the convenience of our Friends and Customers in the Bombay Presidency, we have recently enlarged our Manufactory at our Branch Establishment in Bombay. This will accommodate a greater number of Workmen than we have hitherto been able to find room for. Our principal Workshops are in Calcutta, where we employ a large number of skilled Workmen, both European and Native, and our Bombay Management has been in the past mainly dependent upon them to supply work made to express order.

We hope now, however, to manufacture whatever is required of our Bombay Branch in the CITY of BOMBAY itself. At the same time, our more extensive plant in Calcutta will always be available. By these arrangements a great saving in time will be effected, which in case of Jewellery repairs is often of the first importance.

SPECIAL CARE and ATTENTION is given to our WATCH REPAIRING DEPARTMENT, and no Watches or Clocks are allowed to leave our Workshops until they have been carefully examined and tested by the head of the Department.

CHANG CHIH-TUNG, Viceroy of Liang Hu, has advanced ideas. The night previous to his birthday he ordered all the yamen doors to be locked, and when the city officials went next morning to offer their congratulations, they could not obtain admittance. The Viceroy is said to heartily detest all these empty ceremonies, and looks with more favour on a diligent and honest official than one who kowtows all day and speaks fine phrases.

THEOSOPHICAL LECTURE.—A paper, entitled "Divine Heartache," is the subject for reading and discussion at the meeting of the Theosophical Society, to be held to-morrow evening, at 5-30, at Church Gate Street.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A LAD.—Keshow Gopal, living at Khojah Street, reported to the police, that his son Heera, aged 13 years, left his house on the 28th ultimo, and has since been missing. He was wearing at the time he left home silver ornaments, valued at Rs. 10.

MATUNGA RAILWAY STATION.—A correspondent writes to call attention to the serious want of a proper platform at the Matunga railway station. Passengers suffer much inconvenience and various minor accidents have occurred. Petitions have, he says, been sent in on the subject to the railway authorities, but without effect.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION SERVICE.—The Rev. Dr. Phillips, General Secretary of the Sunday School Union, will conduct a special service in connection with Sunday School work and interests, in St. Andrew's Church, to-morrow, the 18th instant, at 6 p.m., to which all are invited, who are intrested in the work of the Sunday Schools.

FIRE.—Yesterday, at 12 a.m., a canopy erected over a large fire in the compound of the Mombadevie Temple caught fire owing to a spark from the fire, which had been burning for the last five days in honour of a religious ceremony, called "Hom." The fire was speedily extinguished by the people in the Temple before the arrival of fire-engines, which put in an early appearance. The damage is estimated at Rs. 60.

"HAMLET."—To-night Mr. Miln will take a farewell benefit at the Gaiety Theatre, when "Hamlet" will be played by general request on a large number of playgoers. During his three weeks' season in Bombay, Mr. Miln has strained every effort to merit the support of the public, but it must be confessed that the opposition at the Novelty Theatre last week robbed him of much support. An opportunity is, therefore, offered to pay Mr. Miln a well-earned compliment, and it is to be hoped that every lover of the legitimate drama will make a point of attending the theatre this evening.

THE IDEAL COMEDY COMPANY.—Messrs. Harvey and Fletcher's Company is announced to open for a short season at the Gaiety Theatre on Monday evening, and from the programme prepared for the first night a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment may be expected. The most of the artistes are unknown to Bombay, but they all come with excellent credentials, and the Harvey Brothers themselves should prove a draw. The programme is a variety one of a high order including vocal music, comic and sentimental, all manner of novelties and amusing sketches.

MASONIC CLOTHING.—Probably the finest quality of Masonic clothing made in Bombay, whether for the richness of the materials used or the artistic finish which embellished it, was exhibited yesterday by Messrs. Thorpe and Company, the local Masonic jewellers and out-fitters. It was made for Lodge "Caledonia," to which it has been forwarded; and which might well be proud of its possession. It consisted of handsome aprons, made of rich Stewart Tarton silk velvet, and collars, gauntlets, &c., the various emblems being all worked out in pure gold in Bombay, in a style which is creditable to the workmen. The lace, fringe, &c., were also made of the best gold; and the whole turn-out might well be the envy of even English manufacturers.

FATAL FALL FROM A BALCONY.—An inquest was held yesterday by Dr. Blaney, the Coroner, at the J. J. Hospital, touching the death of Mahadoo Rutnajee, aged 33 years. The deceased was a labourer and lived at Mazagon. On Wednesday night at 11 o'clock the deceased returned home the worse for liquor, and fell over a balcony on to the pavement below. The deceased was seriously injured, his spine being fractured. He was taken to the J. J. Hospital, where he died early yesterday morning. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

CONCERT AT ST. PETER'S BOYS' HIGH SCHOOL.—A musical entertainment is to be given on Saturday evening, at 8-45 p.m. in aid of the institute. It is to be hoped many will attend. The institute was started many years ago to enable the inhabitants of Mazagon, where libraries are scarce, to have a read of the local papers. From the start the concern has been a non-supporting one; and it is surprising how the honorary secretary has kept it afloat so long. There are not a few interesting books in the cupboards; but were a few more books and papers taken in, the number of members would no doubt increase. This would, of course, require outlay and here a correspondent suggests, and opportunity presents itself. Let the netted cash at the concert this evening go towards procuring books and periodicals for the institute. From the programme it appears most of the performers are members of the St. Peter's Boys' School. Unless the boys get nervous (for this is their first appearance on the stage) the Cantata with which the programme closes should be a decided success. The boys have been admirably trained by Mr. Withey, organist of St. Peter's.

SUSPICIOUS POSSESSION OF CURRENCY NOTES.—At the Esplanade Police Courts yesterday, before Mr. J. Sanders Slater, acting Chief Presidency Magistrate, Inspector Framjee Bhickajee charged, on remand, Pranjeewan Lalchund with having in his possession Rs. 324 in notes and cash reasonably suspected of having been stolen or fraudulently obtained, and for which he could not give a satisfactory account. The particulars of this case have already appeared. Mr. Turner, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the accused and contended for the discharge of his client as there was no evidence against him but the bare statements made by the police officer. He did not see how the accused could be charged with the doubtful possession of currency notes that had been tampered with, as alleged by the prosecution, because a photographic camera had been found in his house. How the notes came to be effaced was owing to an attempt the accused had made in washing off some ink that had been spilt upon it by one of the accused's children. Mr. Turner opposed Mr. Framjee's application for a further remand of the prisoner in police custody and applied for bail on his behalf. The Magistrate thought that the application was fully justified by the seriousness of the offence. But as the prosecuting officer did not desire the further custody of the prisoner he was enlarged on bail in Rs. 1,000, and one surety for the same amount.

THEFT OF SILVER ORNAMENTS.—At the Esplanade Police Courts before Mr. C. W. Richardson, Inspector Butterfield charged Dewji Mahadoo and Succaram Narayen who had two and three previous convictions against them (1) with dishonestly disposing of two silver armlets, valued at Rs. 13; (2) theft of two watches, valued at Rs. 2; and the accused Mahadoo on a third charge of theft of three silver buttons, valued at Rs. 2. Alatukia Sawji, the first complainant, identified the silver armlets which he deposed were found missing on the morning of August 13, when he opened his cloth shop. His goods were scattered about the floor, his money till removed, and a back window broken open with some bars removed. Copper change to the amount of As. 40 had been stolen together with currency notes and other ornaments. The complainant reported the theft to the police who traced the property to some Marwarees with whom they had been pledged

MYOPIA.

NEAR-SIGHTED OR SHORT-SIGHTED Persons readily appreciate the advantage of wearing Glasses which give them clear Vision for distant objects that would be shadowy or invisible to their unassisted Eyes; but the Vision of the Myopic Eye is generally abnormally acute for minute objects when brought sufficiently close to them, so that the same Persons are less ready to recognize the necessity of correcting the refraction for near objects too.

This necessity does not indeed arise in low degrees of Myopia, but when minute objects, such as small types, cannot be distinctly seen in a good light at the distance of a foot, Glasses are imperatively required for reading, in order to remove the causes that must otherwise operate to increase the defect.

It seldom happens, however, that the same Glasses are useful for correcting both distant and near Vision, and of the two the necessity for correcting the distant Vision is the more urgent, or it may rather be said that one is essentially necessary and the other convenient and desirable.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

BOMBAY MARKET REPORT.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 16.

THE renewed activity in Wheat referred to in our last report was not sustained, and with native holidays intervening for two days at the beginning of the week, business in Exports has been slow again, a spurt in Cotton at the close of last week having been short-lived, while transactions in Seeds have been upon only a moderate scale, though Linseed has advanced somewhat in value. The weather has become bright and seasonable over nearly the whole of the Cotton area, and reports regarding the growing crop are now generally of a favourable tenor. Exchange has fluctuated a little in sympathy with Silver; and on the whole there has been a slight advance in both Bank and Private Paper compared with our quotations of last Friday evening. Government Paper has moved both ways, and closed this evening 1-16 per cent. higher in Fours than the quotation of a week ago. Freights have been weak or quiet for new shipment, but steady or firm for forward loading; and the market is now quiet but steady, with a good demand for April-May tonnage. There has been some increase in business in some lines of Imports during the past week; but prices generally are unchanged.

MONEY.—Some increase in the demand for money during the period covered by the Presidency Banks' Statement of Affairs issued (owing to intervening holidays) on Wednesday afternoon for Monday, was disclosed by the diminution of the Cash Balance to some 395 lakhs, or a falling off of 47¼ lakhs since the date of the previous Return. The principal change had been in Private Deposits, which had diminished by nearly 41 lakhs owing, probably, in some measure to withdrawals in anticipation of the late holidays, during which the Banks were closed; there was also an increase of 31½ lakhs in Bills Discounted, and a slight accession to Loans, the increase in trade requirements since the close of the previous week being represented by nearly 45 lakhs. No change in the rates of the Bank of Bombay has been made this week, and the minimum, therefore, remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

EXCHANGE remained firm to the end of last week at the rates given in our last report, and a few Merchants' Bills were placed at 1s. 5 5-16d. for January-February delivery, and at 1s. 5 ⅝d. for May, for three months' sight Credits; but little or nothing was doing in the Bank media of remittance, and the Banks closed on Saturday evening for two days for the Dasera native holiday. On re-opening on Wednesday morning there was a steady feeling in the market, and some business was done in three months' sight Credits at 1s. 5 7-32d. for near delivery, and at 1s. 5⅛d. for the middle of November, January-February delivery having been quoted at 1s. 5 11-32d. There was not much enquiry for Bank Remittance and the market closed steady at 1s. 5d. for ready Demand and 1s. 4 31-32d. to 1s. 5d. for Telegraphic. Yesterday the market opened flat in response to a material fall in the price of Silver in New York on the previous day and as very few Merchants' Bills came out, the rate weakened during the day, and the market closed weak at a decline of 1-16d. in Bank Remittance, and of 1-32d. in Credits from those ruling on Wednesday evening. To-day the feeling has been quiet but steady with few Private Bills offering, and only a moderate enquiry for Bank Remittance. Three months' sight Credits, for April-May delivery, have been quoted at 1s. 5 9-32d.; and closing rates for ready business are as follows:—

GOVERNMENT PAPER was quiet last Saturday, with not much fresh business passing either for Money or Account; but rates remained steady at Friday's quotations, say, 105⅝ for Fours for cash, 105 11-16 for the next settlement, and 105½ for the November account; with 4¼ per cents quoted nominally at 105½. The market was closed for the first two days of the present week for the Dasera holidays, and on re-opening on Wednesday it was strong in tone, and an advance of ⅛ per cent for Money and ¼ per cent. for Account took place in Fours, closing rates having been 100 1-16 for cash, 105 15-16 for the next settling day at the end of the month, and 105½ for the November account. Yesterday the market was quiet, and also weak in the earlier part of the day, and rates for Fours declined ⅛ to 3-16 per cent., say to 105⅝ for cash, 105 11-16 for the coming settlement, and 105 5-16 for the November account; but before the close a steadier feeling prevailed, and one per cent. of the drop was recovered. To-day the market has been quiet but steady at a partial decline of 1-16 per cent. from yesterday's final rates, closing quotations this evening being 105 13-16 for Fours for cash, 105⅞ for the 28th inst., and 105 5-16 for the end of November, with buyers for both accounts at the rates. 105½ has been the nominal quotation for 4½ per cents this week.

Municipal 5 per cent. Loan is unchanged at 110. Port Trust Bonds are 1½ per cent. higher at 103½.

SHARES.—This market was closed on the first two days of this week for the Dasera holidays; but there has been a good deal of movement in Cotton Mill and Press Scrip, and our quotations for the former this evening, show a considerable advance on those ruling a week ago, in a number of instances, while on others the tendency has been in buyers' favour. We note an advance of Rs. 56 in Presidency Mill Shares; of Rs. 45 in Soonderdas; of Rs. 35 in Star of India; of Rs. 25 in Ripon; of Rs. 20 in Howard and Bullough; of Rs. 15 in Central India; of Rs. 10 each in Colaba Land and Mill, Khatao Muccanji, and Victoria; and of Rs. 5 each in Mahalakshmi, and Khangaum Manufacturing. On the other hand, Bombay National have declined Rs. 40; Coorla, and Britannia, Rs. 15; Empress, Jamshed, Jewraz Balloo, and Oriental, Rs. 5 each; and Hindustan, Rs. 2½ per share. In Cotton Press Shares, there has been an advance of 7½ in Mercantile and New Beras; of Rs. 5 in Motisuli, and of Rs. 2½ in English; while Volkarts, and Prince of Wales have declined Rs. 15 each, and New Indian, Rs. 5. In Miscellaneous shares, Bombay-Burma Trading have advanced Rs. 75 in the first issue, and Rs. 5 in the others. Bombay Fire are Rs. 45 down; Treacher and Co. have advanced Rs. 7½; Thacker and Co., Rs. 3; Phillips and Co., Rs. 4; and Bombay Ice, Rs. 2. Bank Shares show no change.

IMPORTS.

PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a slight improvement in the demand for staple Grey Goods in the bazaar this week, but the average daily offtake is not yet what it generally runs to at this time of the year, the slowness of the enquiry being attributed to the latter rain in the consuming districts. Prices generally are unchanged and holders will not lower their pretensions at all in view of their inability to replace their stocks on lower terms. For Bleached, Dyed, Turkey Red, and printed Goods there has also been a slight improvement in demand, and rates are steadier if not quotably higher. Local Goods are unchanged in position and value.

YARNS.—The market for Imported Twist has remained quiet, and only a small business has been done during the week, but prices are quite unchanged. The sales of Local Spinnings at the three ports for the fortnight ending last Monday, are put down at 15,000 bales, with Exchange the same as before. There has been a fall of ½ to one dollar at Hongkong; and China buyers here are slow and indifferent; but spinners are firmly refusing to accept lower rates, and consequently there has been next to no business done, the week's Sales summing up only about 500 bales. The market closed steady, at the following official quotations, and with a continued demand for 10s., 12s., and 16s.

Twist...	... No. 6s Mule,	As. 3½	to	4	per lb.

" ...	... " 30s "	" 6¾	"	7	"
" ...	... " 40s "	" 8	"	8¼	"

METALS.—A small business has been passing in Copper, and prices have declined 4 annas per cwt. in a quiet market. Yellow Metal has been in moderate request and steady in tone at last week's quotations. Iron has been taken to a moderate extent, and prices have given way 4 annas, the market closing steady at the decline.

COAL is steady. Sales have been reported during the past week of ready Powell's Dufferin Cardiff, for Knight Templar (s) at Rs. 15½ per ton; but no forward sales have been effected owing to the high prices asked by sellers. For forward shipment there are sellers of Powell's, Dufferin's, and Davison's West Hartley at Rs. 15½ and Rs. 14½ per ton respectively, buyers' ideas being Rs. 15 for the former, and Rs. 14 for the latter.

EXPORTS.

COTTON.—An active demand from exporters and local spinners sprang up for this staple at the close of last week in anticipation of the American Agricultural Bureau monthly report regarding the Cotton Crop in the United States, and a large business was done, in a firm market on Saturday, but without any advance in rates. On the re-opening of the market on Monday, however, enquiry from both quarters had subsided, and transactions were upon only a small scale, though the feeling was steady and prices were unchanged. Thereafter the tone of the market became quiet, with only a small business passing, and on the bases of previous rates. The purchases for export during the past week have aggregated about 6,500 bales, including a line of New Bengals, for January delivery, at Rs. 165-6, the balance, being old stock from godown, consisting mainly of Oomras and Dhollera varieties, Ginned Compta, Westerns, and Bengals; while the Mills have taken about 5,000 bales of old stuff, made up of Oomras, Dholleras, Compta Ginned, and Tinnevelley. The market closed quiet this evening, with prices of old stuff unchanged, but rates for contracts in the new crop were Rs. 2 to Rs. 5 per candy lower.

The official weather and crop telegrams published on Monday reported the weather bright, with no sign of rain over the whole of the Cotton area except at Hubli, in the Dharwar circle, where rain had been general over the district, and had, on Monday morning, every appearance of a continued fall, and where the Cotton crop prospects had consequently much improved. In the Bengal circle the plants were showing bolls at Agra, at Delhi they were doing well; at Beawar they still required more rain; and from Gawnpore the report of serious damage from too much rain was repeated. In the Oomrawattee circle, the flowering of the plants was advanced, and bolls were appearing, the only exception being Nagpur, where excessive rain had seriously damaged the crop. No fresh news was to hand from Broach, but no further rain had apparently fallen in that district since the middle of last week; nor had any more been registered in any district of the Dhollera circle. Monday's report from all being that the Cotton plants were flourishing.

The telegraphic news to hand from the Cotton-growing districts yesterday morning was that the weather generally was bright and seasonable, with no sign of more rain, and, with the exceptions in the Bengal and Oomra circles, referred to in the previous report, the crop was flourishing over the whole of the area. The plants were shedding bolls at Agra, and showing them in most of the districts of the Oomra circle; and the report stated that at Oomrawatee and Broach the plants could scarcely look better than they did.

The following are to-day's quotations for full-pressed cotton with the equivalents in Sterling, Cost, and Freight to Liverpool, via Canal, without commission, viz.:—

WHEAT.—Last week closed with a firm feeling in this market; but business was checked by an advance of an anna per cwt. in prices all round, on Saturday, and only a moderate export business was done; and though the tone was still firm on Monday there was no return of activity, and the market thereafter was generally steady or quiet, without further movement in rates, the occurrence of native holidays at the beginning of the week helping to restrict business.

SEEDS have been taken on most days to a moderate extent in a steady market, though latterly the feeling has been firmer and prices have not varied, with the exception of that for Linseed, which advanced half an anna per cwt. on two occasions, our closing quotations this evening being as follows:—

THE MYSORE REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MYSORE, Oct. 15.

The eleventh annual assembly of representative ryots and merchants from all parts of the Province met at the Ranacharlu Memorial Hall to-day. The British Resident, Sir Harry Prendergast, and his staff, and the principal officers of the State, were present. The number of representatives present was more than 250. This is the first meeting of the assembly after the introduction of the elective system sanctioned last year. The Dewan read his address welcoming the representatives who have been elected by the people themselves. The financial results of the year 1890-91 were most favourable; the receipts, 145 lakhs, being the largest ever realized by the State. The increased revenue was principally under excise, forests, and gold mines. The total expenditure of the year was 122 lakhs. These figures do not include the railway receipts, which amounted to Rs. 1,25,000, and the payments made on account of railways, Rs. 11,10,000. The net surplus of the year was thus Rs. 12,64,632, which added to the opening balance of Rs. 92,11,424 gave a closing balance of Rs. 104,76,056. The Dewan then touched upon the working of the several departments of the State. In the Public Works Department the Hindupur Railway is being vigorously pushed forward, and it is expected that the section of the line to Doddaballapur will be opened for traffic in April next. The extension to Nanjangud has been all but completed by the Southern Maharatta Railway Company, and will shortly be open for traffic. The railway lines under contemplation are a line from Kolar Road station to Kolar Gold Fields, a line from Birur to Shimoga, and branch lines to connect Chikmaglur and Hassan. Stress was laid on the importance of well irrigation, and reference was made to the concessions sanctioned to the ryots in regard to Soppinbettas, forest trees, kumri cultivation, and fuel. In the Educational Department girls' schools have been placed under the direct control of local committees, and the inspecting staff was reorganized. The most important point referred to in the address was the grant of the privilege of election to the Municipalities of Mysore and Bangalore. Half the number of Municipal Commissioners will be elected by the people under the new system. It is proposed to overhaul the Muzroi institutions, and place them on an efficient footing. A scheme for the training of men with high and liberal education for the higher grades of the service will be introduced. Four subdivisions under separate officers will be constituted.

The address ended with congratulations upon the recent rains, which have removed all fears of drought and consequent scarcity.

VANITY FAIR.

(FROM OUR LADY CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Sept. 24.

"I am not more convinced of the certainty of my own existence than of the truth of the science of physiognomy; or than that this truth may be demonstrated—and I hold him to be a weak and foolish person who shall affirm that the effects of the impression made upon him by all possible human countenances are equal."—LAVATER.

Phœnix-like from the ashes of Lavater, a brood of young physiognomists have lately sprung into existence; who, after the manner of most fledglings, audacious and assertive in their youthful inexperience, attempt flights far beyond the conception of the wise old parent bird. Lavater went direct to nature to learn her secrets—he recognized that it is in the expression of a face that the character is found, or, as some one skilled like him in face-reading has said: "The test of beauty is a finer charm than skill in surfaces, in outlines or rules of art can ever teach, namely, a radiation from the work of art of human character—a wonderful expression through stone or canvas, or musical sound, of the deepest and simplest attribute of our nature, and therefore most intelligible at last to those souls which have these attributes." But our physiognomists of to-day acknowledged no need of studying nature face to face—they are quite content to take it at second-hand from photographs. Given a tolerable photograph, a professor of the science will manage to evolve sufficient characteristics from its analysis, as, in case of necessity, to supply an accurate personal description of a runaway to the Police News or Hue and Cry. In reply to a person signing the pseudonym St. Augustine, a certain professor says: "Quick at comprehension, and very intellectual; musical, constructive, and clever with your hands; impulsive and possessing strong passions, which require great self-control; courageous and high spirited; material in your aims; eloquent and reasoning; determined and do not readily give in; indifferent to money matters; keenly sensitive: can hold your own; sympathetic and womanly." Of another, signing herself Bee, the professor writes: "Eloquent, discursive, and fond of talking; possess a keen sense of the ridiculous; to you very little is sacred; seek affection and are much guided by it; hasty over small matters; desirous of knowledge; seek harmless admiration, but are faithful when you really love" Now, in the name of common sense, what is the use of such a science?

This new St. Augustine has undoubtedly learned already from her school-mistress that she is quick at comprehension, intellectual, musical, and constructive; her mother or her sisters and brothers possibly have acknowledged her cleverness with her hands; her servants could perhaps give evidence of her being impulsive and passionate; her friends realize that she is determined, and does not readily give in, and nobody knows better than herself of her indifference to money matters, sensitiveness, and womanly sympathies. If the professor has sent a correct solution of St. Augustine's character, it is something to wonder at—that is all. It does not make St. Augustine a whit more clever or less impulsive. So with the eloquent and discursive "Bee." There is very little advantage in hearing that she has points' such as glibness of tongue, and a keen sense of the ridiculous, for which she has been more or less constantly snubbed during the course of her schooldays. But, in another direction, what an opening there is for the skill of the face-reading professor. Are we about to take up our abode with a sea-side boarding-house ma'am. What is more easy than to take a snap-shot at her countenance with a demon-camera, and by return of post learn from the professor if her character is such as to make a prolonged residence under her roof desirable. Or, are we contemplating matrimony, though doubtful of the characteristics of the beloved one's mamma? How conveniently we can reduce doubt to certainty by enclosing her photograph to the skilful professor for analysis, and our forebodings are correct, at once, before things have reached a climax, save ourselves the life long martyrdom of being sat on by "an old soldier" mother-in-law. It is in such emergencies that one recognizes the value of these new disciples of Lavater; and if they condescended to teach their art, there are very few of us who in the course of life would not find a little face-reading useful. There is a time when most people believe in the truth of deeply-fringed blue eyes— eyes of most unholy blue, with lashes that rise and fall bewitchingly. Yes—most people have been taken in once too often by the unholy blue eyes with the soft long playful lashes, and the professor's skill is of no avail in patching up the damage when it is done—though it might have averted the harm if it had been tried in time.

It was hardly intended by Providence that the scientists of the 19th Century should hang an alphabet on our features, and theorize as to the complement of virtue and vice, talent and stupidity indicated by a snub nose, a perky chin, a fishy or a limpid eye. But even, in the ways of Providence, it is the unexpected that happens. Not only have we sermons in stones, books in the running brooks, but we have an inexhaustive source of study in our neighbour's faces.

Apropos of faces there is a reproduction in Woman this week of the photograph of Mrs. Ashton Dilke, now Mrs. Russell Cooke. The wedding, which was very quiet owing to mourning in the bride-groom's family, was celebrated on the 19th Sept., at St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington. The bride was attended by her sister, the wife of Doctor Robert Priestly, and the service was conducted by the Rev. William Bramwell, after which Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cooke left for Paris en route for Italy.

Besides the numerous presents from friends including Sir Hor ace and Lady Davey, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Courtney, Dr. Hunter, M.P., Mr. Woodall, M.P., Mr. Mark Beaufoy, M.P., the Countess of Rothes, the Hon. Lady Mary Leslie, and the Hon. Raymond E. H. Leslie, were gifts from the London School Board, of which Mrs. Ashton Dilke was a member, and from the lady examiners in needlework connected with the London School Board Mrs. Russell Cooke, as Mrs. Ashton Dilke, was a prominent upholder of the cause of women, and among the "strong" women, she has always been remarkable for being one of the well-dressed. As the proprietor of the Weekly Dispatch, a strong democratic paper, it seems very fit that she should choose as husband a journalist, who will be a useful addition to her staff.

According to Mr. Andrew Lang, in Longman's Magazine, literary men are not ideal husbands. In Carlyle's life of Schiller, it is remarked by some one that Schiller's health was not such as to make him a comfortable husband. Mr. Andrew Lang seems to have acquired the idea somehow that literature as a profession does not make a man a comfortable husband. Writing on literary men as husbands he advises women to seek their husbands from other fields of labour than literature, because the literary man does his work at home. Disturbing him spoils his temper, and his distracted mind makes him dull company. Home industries, he implies, may be salutary when they are mechanical, but not when they are mental. If the subject is not too threadbare from old age, perhaps Mr. Lang will give next month, as a pendant to his literary men as husbands, an article on literary women as wives, and retrieve the reputation of the literary women up to date, who in spite of her blueness wears pretty dresses and arranges dainty dinners.

Miss Millington Lathbury, who obtained the distinction of being the only lady who passed the school of Literæ Humaniores at Oxford lately, has announced a series of lectures, which she will give in October at the British Museum. The subjects will be dress, marriage, and funeral customs in Ancient Greece, and as far as practicable she will illustrate her discourse by objects in the galleries. At her first lecture she will attire a lay figure in the correct Greek drapery. Whether she will undertake, like the universal provider, to conduct in classic fashion everything from the cradle to the grave is not yet announced in the programme.

Miss E. M. Cunningham, of the Ladies' Collegiate School, Londonderry, has just succeeded in obtaining the Irish Society's Scholarship £300; tenable at Girton, Cambridge. Miss Cunningham took first honours in German and Natural Philosophy and second honours in English and Latin.

On the 17th, 18th, and 19th inst. the members of the County Limerick Hunt Club gave a series of entertainments at the Theatre in aid of the Hunt Fund. The audience, which included most of the county families, as well as the occasionally resident aristocracy, and the members of the Hunt Club in "pink" encouraged the amateur players with enthusiastic applause, which was undoubtedly deserved. In "The Wonderful Woman" Miss Kathleen Henry, a young Dublin actress, took the title role, supported by Major Buckle, R. A., as the Marquis De Frontignac, and by Lord Glentworth, son of the Earl of Limerick, as Crepin the Cobbler. "Dearest Mamma," the second piece, was cleverly played and Gilbert's musical fairy tale "Creatures of Impulse," was also acted with brightness and spirit. A jig, danced by Viscount Glentworth to the music on the violin played by his sister-in-law, Miss Irwin, was a source of great amusement to the public. Among the ladies who took principal part in the performance, were Mrs. A. Bannatyne, Mrs. A. Bussell, Miss Gabin, Miss Gason, Miss Blood-Smyths, Miss Burke Irwin, and Miss Kathleen Henry. The gentlemen of the company, beside Earl Glentworth were Colonel Gunler, Major Davidson, Major Coode, Mr. Bullen Smith, Mr. Rennie, of the Black Watch, Major Buckle, Mr. Kirwan, Mr. McKay, Royal Artillery, and Mr. Courtenay Croker.

THE RUSSIANS AND THE CHINESE IN LITTLE TIBET.

III.—AKSU AND KASHGAR.

Aksu is a place of considerable antiquity. It appears in the Chinese annals, under the Han Dynasty, as early as the Second Century, B.C., and some authors think it to be the "Auxacia" mentioned three centuries later in the geography of Ptolomy. Hiuen Tsing, before crossing the Muzart Pass, stopped one night at the Kingdom of Poh-lub-kia, as the Eastern portion of Aksu, in his day, was called; whilst at the end of the Fourteenth Century, in connection with the wars of Tamerlane, Aksu is described as consisting of three castles, in communication one with another, and regarded by the inhabitants of the neighbouring provinces as an asylum in the time of war. The Aksu district now contains about a dozen villages, and is said to have a population of 180,000 souls.

When approaching the place from the north, as described in my last letter, we were not a little surprised to find awaiting us at the small hamlet of Shiangir a deputation of white-turbaned Afghans and Andijanis, all of them mounted, and ready to escort us into Aksu. But first we were to turn aside for a feast they had prepared of a slaughtered sheep, under shady trees, near sparkling rills, with abundance of luscious fruit. Here we quaffed tea as we lay on carpets; and those who had not breakfasted early as I, did ample justice to the viands set forth. Conversation also flowed apace, in the course of which the Afghans said they had similarly gone out, not long before, to meet two others of my countrymen, namely, Mr. Carey, the greatest of English travellers in Chinese Turkistan, and Lieutenant Younghusband. The Andijanis also, who were Russian subjects, informed me that for a traveller to come, heralded from Kashgar and Kuldja by two Russian Consuls was an event that did not happen twice in a century. They felt bound, therefore, they said, to do for me all they could. Accordingly, they all formed in procession, and at the head of the cavalcade I approached the top of the cliff from the edge of which Aksu comes suddenly into view. We descended into the town by a ten-foot gully and passed through narrow streets between astonished and gaping crowds to the house of Madamin Bai, a native aksakal or elder, whose business it was to look after the local interests of Russian traders. His premises were large and comodious, with plenty of stable accommodation, or rather standing room, for our horses. My host's reception-room, too, was large and lofty, whilst to me were given his wife's apartments, that lady having taken her departure for a season. On the morrow we took a ride round the town. It is said to contain 4,010 houses, some of them mounting up the sides of the surrounding cliffs, and there are in the town 500 Chinese and 500 Dungan (Chinese Mahomedan) families. The rest are Turkish. Mounting to what was the fort, built during the insurrection of Yakub Khan in place of an old Chinese citadel, we obtained a good view of the place with the river and adjacent gardens and rice fields, the verdure of which was in striking contrast to the parched appearance of other portions of the landscape. The houses looked poverty-stricken and crowded together, one or two mosques only rising above the low, dull level of the flat, earthen roofs. The bazaar, however, was full of men and women, not all of the latter being veiled. Our foreign appearance attracted attention and collected a crowd amongst whom the Turkish element was respectful or timid; but not so the few Chinese whom we saw in this Turkish quarter. On looking into the shops there were seen both English and Russian goods; the English of fine muslin (though I do not remember much else) and the Russian of cottons and chintzes. Twenty years ago, Aksu was said to be celebrated for its manufacture of saddlery and harness, its pottery, and raw hide jars called dabba, for oil, butter, &c. Its tobacco also was considered the best in the country. All these, with cattle, and the shawl wool of Ush-Turfan were exported to the neighbouring towns. Also at a still earlier date, lead, copper and sulphur mines were worked in the neighbouring mountains, and coal, found in the hills (near Karabagh where there are hot sulphur springs) was brought into the town. Now, however, it seemed to me the trade of Aksu must have decreased, though I am without statistics on the point; but everything looked poor. In keeping with this it may be added that when on the morning of departure we wanted to exchange lumps of silver to the value of £2 for small coins for purchases by the way, the messengers declared that they had tried throughout the bazaar, but that no one possessed so much ready cash. I took early opportunity to send my card to the Chinese Taotai or General, the Governor of the district, who lived in the new fortified city, seven miles off. On arriving, the Taotai sent to say that he had "lost his father," which was said to be a polite way sometimes of excusing himself from a personal interview, and we saw instead his Secretary. Our reception was conducted with ceremony, and we were taken to an inner audience-chamber and regaled with tea and pudding, with varieties. Business was then opened by my asking that the two men who had accompanied me from Kuldja might be sent back; next, that two Chinese might be given me as escort to Kashgar; and lastly, that I might be allowed to visit the local prison; all of which was granted. To the prison we went on the afternoon of the next day, "one of the most horrible I have ever visited," says my diary. The room that called forth this note was a small one into which 23 men were crowded, the only furniture in it being long, wooden stocks, like those of Bokhara, to hold the prisoners' feet at night. The ventilation was by a hole in the roof, and the atmosphere was so close and hot that one could hardly breathe. Several prisoners wore the cangue, or wooden frame, about the neck, which is said to be rather a censure or reprimand than a punishment; and is supposed in China to carry no disgrace with it. The frame weighs usually between 20 and 30 lbs., but I think I have seen one heavier at Kiakhta. It is made to rest upon the shoulders without chafing the neck, but is so broad as to prevent the wearer feeding himself, except, as in the case of the man at Kiakhta, by means of a long-handled spoon. The name, residence, and offence of the delinquent are written upon the cangue for the information of passers by, and the culprit is usually exposed in a public place. Besides the cangue we saw at Aksu two instances in which a wooden post six feet high, and perhaps eighteen inches round, was chained to a man's neck and ankle, so that wherever he moved this undesirable companion dragged or lifted by a cord from the middle had also to be carried. I distributed some tengas or small silver coins among the prisioners, and asked that they might be brought outside into the yard; after which I was allowed to take several photographs, some of the poor wretches being almost without clothing, and all very miserable in appearance. But other abominations of a similar character awaited us at Kashgar. Kashgar is distant from Aksu about 300 miles, or a caravan journey of 16 days. Its Yengi Shar, or New Town, is the principal fortress in the Western portion of Chinese Turkistan. Here we observed in riding through its main street several Chinese shops and merchants. Here and there also might be seen Chinese or Manchu women, but they are comparatively rare, since most of the Chinese in Kashgar are soldiers or officials from China proper, who do not bring with them wives, the Turkish readily marrying their daughters for such periods as their Chinese husbands require them. The condition of the Kashgar women is extremly degraded. They outnumber the men in the proportion of more than six to one, so that fathers practically sell their daughters, even before the age of puberty, for from five to ten shillings each. So debased is the condition of morals that I was told, seriously, by a European who had lived five years in Kashgar, that he knew many girls to have had 20 husbands before they were capable of becoming mothers. The messenger who came from the Russian Consulate to meet me had only recently married a bride of twelve years old, and he was her fourth husband; whilst my own groom on receiving 25—for wages, must needs go and take a girl of twelve whom his father had selected for him, and wished him to marry, in order that after accompanying me to India he might have an inducement to return home again. This is what Mahomedanism is doing for Chinese Turkistan; for these so-called marriages and divorces are all performed and sanctioned by the Mullahs!

About five miles west of Yengi Shar we arrived at the old Turkish town of Kashgar; not indeed the Kashgar mentioned by Marco Polo; but a town built in the early part of the 16th Century. It is surrounded by a wall, and encloses a number of mud-built houses with gardens and a plentiful distribution of trees. The Chinese authorities advertised of my coming, had placed at my disposal a guest house in the middle of the town; which, if it was somewhat dark and restricted in accommodation, had the advantage of being in the midst of native life and bustle.

Ordinarily the traveller's only refuge is the native caravanserai or inn, which generally consists of a series of rooms closely akin to stables, round a court-yard full of horses and carts; such as I have described in a previous letter. The landlord can generally supply his guest with fodder and corn, and a servant or two; but to Western ideas everything is extremely rough, and in Chinese Turkistan, dirty also. In summer one is covered with dust, and in the rainy season the mud and dirt are indescribable. On the morning of our arrival cards were sent to me from the Taotai or General, and from the Governor of the district and the town. I also called on [illegible], the Russian Consul, [illegible] in St. Petersburg, and by way from A[illegible] smoothed my [illegible] beside the wall on the north [illegible] tive building [illegible] of his Secretary, Mr. [illegible] of about forty Cossacks. [illegible] ulate took us through the [illegible] September, were on sale luscious peaches twenty-five for a penny, excellent melons a penny each; and abundance of grapes at corresponding prices. The city streets are narrow and not much crowded with carts, though here and there may be seen a vehicle with the clumsiest of wheels, bringing in from the country slabs of stone, or blocks of wood. The only carriage in the town is that of the Russian Consul.

When the Taotai came to call on me he was borne in a huge palanquin by perhaps a dozen men and preceded by a servant with a gong who drummed and shouted that all and sundry should get out of the way. If any failed to give heed, there came immediately behind, two lictors with whips thick enough to keep in order an elephant; whilst next, walked two or more executioners with batons the length of a broomstick and spatulated at one end, wherewith to administer a beating at a moment's notice. We renewed acquaintance with these lictors when visiting the prison, which I asked to see, and after some delay was allowed to enter. Certain persons take upon themselves to say that when I went through the prisons of Siberia, they were prepared for me, so that I might be hoodwinked. But those who say so take very good care not to offer proof; and I can only say "I don't believe it."

In Kashgar, however, things certainly were brushed up to a maximum of respectability. The officials also wished me to believe that they had only three prisoners, and these three I was shown, clad in garments only an hour or two I judged out of the hands of the tailor. They were imprisoned for manslaughter, and consequently dressed in scarlet cotton, their wrists being confined in front of them at the lower end by a piece of iron, the upper end of which encircled the neck. Thus they could not put the hand to the mouth and were so to be kept for four years; two having served half, and the others three-fourths of their time. Beard and hair had alike been allowed to grow, and they looked miserable objects. I was allowed to photograph this curious trio, with lictor and executioner in their tall hats bearing tin ornaments, and with the custodian of the prison wearing on his breast his badge of office.

I was favoured, too, with one of the irons for neck and hands (and have seen its like nowhere else) as well as some wooden sticks for finger torture (something like thumb-screws), one of the lictors' whips, and a face-slapper or leather palm, wherewith to slap on the cheek naughty women.

Kashgar is not rich in public edifices, the only one worthy of notice being the Mausoleum or shrine of Hazrat Aphak, a mullah-king of the country who was buried in 1693. The Mausoleum is faced with blue and white glazed tiles; and is surrounded with poplar trees. Adjoining it are college, mosque, and monastery, whilst all around are graveyards wherein are buried some of the noted men of the country. A common custom in Mahomedan graveyards in Central Asia is the placing as offerings, on the tombs of great men and heroes, of horns of the wild sheep, or when these cannot be had, of goats and rams. So numerous are these horns at the shrine of Hayrat Aphak, that they are arranged in pyramids on brick-built pedestals.

But the spot most interesting, perhaps, to Englishmen who remember the Dungan rebellion of twenty years ago in Chinese Central Asia, was the place shown to me as the rifled grave of Yakub Khan. This soldier of fortune left Khokand when the Russians were pushing down to Samarkand; and having crossed to Kashgar as General to Khoja Buzurg Khan, first deposed his master, then ousted the Chinese, and gained possession of the country, which was so far recognized by the Indian Government that a friendly mission was sent to him under Sir Douglas Forsyth in 1873. Subsequently Yakub Khan was buried near the shrine of Hazrat Aphak. But the Chinese on reconquering the country would not leave in peace the bones of the usurper, whose remains were exhumed, and all traces of his monument so completely removed that I had to ask two mullahs to stand pointing, whilst I took a photograph, to where the grave had been. When leaving Kashgar I was driven out of the town preceded by a vanguard of two white-turband outriders, a Chinese mounted attendant, and two Cossacks carrying a silk banner, the colours of the regiment on one side, and those of the Consul on the other. Next came the calecho with the Russian Consul, the Secretary, and myself; then a band of Cossacks in full dress, the rear being brought up by my servants and three carts of baggage.

Thus we proceeded as far as the spot where Adolphe Schlagintweit was put to death. The Consul had expressed his desire that I should officiate at some sort of memorial service in setting up a brass plate which he had exerted himself to get, and had recently received, worded thus:—

"To the traveller Adolphe Schlagintweit who fell a sacrifice to his intense devotion to geographical science 14-26 August 1857. This memorial was erected by Nicolas Feodorovitch Petrovsky, with the assistance of the Members of the Imperial Russian Geographical Society in 1888."

But, as yet, preliminaries were not all arranged; so, at this historic spot, the Consular party turned back, whilst I continued as will be seen in my next letter to Yengi Hissar and Yarkand.

MR. JEREMIAH LYON.

In its series of "City men at home," the City Leader has the following sketch of Mr. Jeremiah Lyon :—

The enthusiastic Liberal, who has had the temerity to question the right of Sir William Hart-Dyke to sit in Parliament for the Dartford Division of Kent, is a remarkable man in many respects, and he resides in a remarkably pretty house in the charmingly picturesque Valley of Caterham. The guide books are rather loud in their praises of Caterham Valley, and the London tourist and the London tourist's family make a raid on its peaceful serenity at least once a week during that portion of the year which has now to serve us for summer.

Riddings Court, Mr. Lyon's residence, with its pretty grounds and picturesque, healthy situation, is not unknown to pleasure-seekers among the Surrey hills. It is within ten minutes' walk of the sleepy little station of Caterham, with its single line of rails, over which, at many points, the branches of stately elms meet to form an avenue of green, through which Sir Edward Watkin's fiery untamed monsters rush at express—South-Eastern express—speed. But one can always find something to be thankful for, and a journey by a South-Eastern train, when it is Caterham Valley-wards, has its compensations. It would almost be sinful to speed through it at sixty miles an hour. But it is of Mr. Lyon and Riddings Court that we would write, and the two combined afford ample scope for the pen.

Mr. Lyon's house is of the same substantial white-stone kind so indigenous to West Surrey, was built some twenty years ago, and is one of the best arranged and equipped houses we have yet seen. It was evidently designed by a believer in the saw, "a place for "everything and everything in it is place." There, undoubtly, is a place for everything, and quite as surely everything is in its place, and everything is as neat and trim as the proverbial new pin. The exquisite taste which characterises the reception-room in Mr. Lyon's house is manifest in the five acres of grounds that surround it, in the well-stocked conservatories, in the farmyard with its grunting Berkshires (who, by the bye, receive a weekly bath and a scrub down), in the tables, and in the dog-kennels, the only occupant of which at the time of our visit—a ferocious-looking, but timid, old Russian boarhound—appearing to be as well looked after as are half the human beings in these times when poverty and distress are sadly too much to the fore.

Mr. Lyon is a great lover of his garden, and it is, therefore, needless to say that a large portion of his grounds is cultivated. His leisure is about equally divided between his garden and his good work for the amelioration of the lot of the world's workers. Three or four gardeners are constantly employed at Riddings Court, and they contrive, with the advice and assistance of their employer, to make it into a veritable paradise. One feature of Mr. Lyon's garden is the abundance of the old-fashioned homely flowers that used to delight our grandfathers and grandmothers before floriculture was what it now is, and before choice exotics were so common. A walk through the grounds and a talk afterwards with their owner in his own particular little sanctum is an experience to be remembered, for Mr. Lyon is a travelled and exceedingly well-informed man, but very modest withal.

He first saw the light of day some forty-four or forty-five years ago, and an active business career, extending over a quarter of a century, has left him the same strong, healthy looking man he was when he established the well-known firm of Jeremiah Lyon and Co. in 1867. He was, we believe, educated privately in London, and entered upon that which he in time so distinguished head at a very early age, to succeed to the business, as we already indicated, a few years later. The London establishmant of this firm, which has, perhaps, more business transactions with the Indian and Australian colonies than any other house in the trade, is at 4, Lombard Court. Here a very large staff is maintained, and some idea of the transactions of the firm may be gathered from the statement that in the course of one week it writes something like a thousand letters. Mr. Lyon is deservedly popular with his employés, many of whom have been with him for upwards of twenty years. His popularity is none the less apparent because he rules with a firm hand. At 4, Lombard Court an excellent system of discipline is maintained, and rigid rules are adhered to with beneficial results. The chief himself is always on the spot. Ten o'clock in the morning finds him at business in his pleasant private apartment at the rear of the building, and the occasions are rare indeed when he leaves before 5-30 or 6 o'clock. His two partners, Mr. A. G. Lyon and Mr. Walker, are equally indefatigable in their exertions, and so the big house has been built up.

In addition to its London establishment it has extensive offices and warehouses in Birmingham, at which an enormous trade is annually done with the East Indies, China, and Japan. Mr. Lyon himself has twice travelled through India, and, in addition to acquiring knowledge that has been of great value to him in his business, he has at Riddings Court many evidences of the esteem in which he is held out there. Here we find a costly present from a foreign Government for services performed; there a tribute to his exertions in behalf of the natives, and, indeed, on every hand one sees ample indications that Mr. Lyon's intense desire to assist others is more than appreciated.

A large amount of his time is given to the welfare of the Strangers' Home for Asiatics, Africans, and South Sea Islanders at Limehouse, of which institution he is a trustee and a member of the board of directors. This home provides a comfortable and respectable lodging for any Orientals or Africans who may find themselves in difficulties while in this country, and is doing good work. According to the last issued report, in addition to the large number of foreign seamen and others received, no fewer than nine Punjaubee claimants were admitted and cared for during 1890, being the greatest number of such persons ever registered in any one year. As usual, all came over the water to see Her Majesty the Queen, and to present petitions to her for the restoration of property which they had lost in lawsuits, or had claimed and failed to obtain through the Courts in India. Owing in great measure to the exertions of the missionaries at the home, all have now returned to India except one, who was insane, and in the lunatic ward of the Poplar Workhouse, but has lately been discharged, and his present whereabouts is unknown. It is hoped that those claimants who have thus been induced to go back to India will take home to their countrymen such a report of the climate of England in winter as will be a salutary warning to similar litigants.

Mr. Lyon is too greatly interested in the Brixton Orphanage, where upwards of three hundred fatherless girls are provided for, and where the help is entirely voluntary. Indeed, he is associated with nearly every movement which has for its object the bettering of the position of the masses, and is, we should imagine, just the sort of man the Liberals and Radicals of Dartford want to speak for them in the House.

The district which he seeks to represent is just the one that should be represented by a commercial man. It abounds in engineering, shipbuilding, paper milling, cement, chemical, and other factories, and is being rapidly developed. A large number of men are employed at Erith, Crayford, and a dozen other centres of labour, whilst in the agricultural districts the workers who supply us with fruit and jam are numerous. As we have said, the commercial interests of the divison appear to justify the electors in suggesting that a commercial man should act for them at St. Stephen's. Besides, does not Mr. Lyon deal very largely in all the commodities they produce, and is this not another reason why he should be more closely associated with them? One thing is certain and that is that, whilst he has nothing to gain, the electors will be considerably benefited. He is anxious that the district should be even more prosperous than it is. He believes it can be developed to a very much greater extent.

"The great obstacle," he says, "to the further commercial development of the district is that the railway fares are so excessive. I am, as you know, in favour of the zone system. When the question was before Parliament some time ago Sir W. Hart-Dyke voted against it, although in one village alone in the division more than one thousand voters would have been benefited by it. We must have cheap railway communication. One large firm of manufacturing chemists send their products to town by river in their own private launch rather than pay the excessive rates demanded by the railway company."

Mr. Lyon's is, in short, the Labour programme. He has always had much sympathy with the working classes, and thinks that if only labour can be placed on a satisfactory basis, whereby strikes can be avoided, that will be preferable to any Referee Bill. He does not go the whole length of Socialism, and has an intense objection to monopolists of every description. He, very wisely, would put his foot firmly down on the present system of allowing members of the Ministry to hold appointments on the boards of public companies.

Mr. Lyon married some twenty-three years ago, and has a family of one son and four daughters. His son, Mr. J. Malcolm Lyon, is an officer of the 1st V.B., Royal West Surrey Regiment. His eldest daughter inherits much of her mother's nature in that she wishes to be of some use in the world. Few young ladies, surrounded by all the luxuries that wealth can command, would voluntarily serve for twelve months in the wards of a hospital, yet this is what Miss Lyon has done, and done so well that her services as a hospital nurse are in great request. The tastes of Mr. Lyon's other daughters are more of an artistic and musical nature, and it is needless to add that no trouble nor expense is spared to meet their every wish in this matter.

Mr. Lyon is an enthusiastic Mason, and a member of the Reform and Gresham Clubs. He has never been a Parliamentary candidate before, and is confident of success in his first venture. From what we know of him, Sir William Hart-Dyke must look to himself. In 1885, the majority in his favour was only 482, and since then strange things have happened in the political world—many of which may result in the Liberal candidate obtaining votes that a few years ago were given to the other side.

The Rev. F. W. Bourne, whose life forms the subject of an appreciative sketch in the Christian Age is described by the Chief Justice of South Australia, the Hon. S. Way, as "the most representative man of the denomination of the Bible Christian Connexion." He presided at the conference of that body held at Penzance, and was then appointed to represent his denomination at the Methodist Œcumenical Council at Washington this autumn. As a writer he has won a reputation beyond the limits of his own connexion, and his book, "The King's Son," has reached a circulation of three hundred thousand copies. He has been a voluminous contributor to the literature of his denominational [illegible]. He was [illegible] sixtieth

SOME STRIKING EXTRACTS FROM A STRANGE BOOK.

Marie Bashkirtseff's Secret Letters, an extraordinary book—almost as extraordinary as the now world-famous diary, only simpler, more pathetic —has now appeared in an English dress. That dress is a pretty, almost a luxurious one. The price is low enough to reach, at least, the middle-class pocket, which has bought 100,000 copies of the "Journal" in the States, and half a dozen editions in Great Britain. The translation, though a little "foreign" in places and from quite another hand than that which introduced the "Journal" to most of its English readers, is lively and faithful. Altogether the book—of which we published a review some two months ago, when it first appeared in French—is one which everybody ought to read, which most people will read, which will fascinate in the reading. Here we shall only supplement our former criticism by a few extracts, which we have grouped roughly under three headings.

THE SECRET LETTER-BAG.

(To M. Alexandre Dumas) . . . What I ask is that you should be for once the spiritual director of a woman who desires to consult you, as she would a priest, regarding a very serious matter. But reassure yourself, Monsieur and illustrious man; I have not the slightest intention of recounting to you "the romance of my life," or anything else that would affect your nerves. . . . If, then, you are as good as I imagine you to be, come on Thursday, March 20, to the ball at the Opera House, the only place where I can see you. . . . I should like to say to you that I am a woman comme il faut, but that would make you think the contrary. . . .

(To the same, later) . . . I cried with anger at your thinking what you did, but I was in truth too silly. You are not the man to whom to send foolish epistles, copied by a public scribe. . . . I prayed to God, and I thought you might be that rare being who, instead of taking me for, &c., &c., would understand that a soul in torment had come to you for light. . . . As to the guidance of which I stand in need, I shall ask it from Him who suggested to me the thought of asking it from you. Sleep well, Monsieur, and continue to be as much a bourgeois in private as you are an artist for the public; that too is an excellent method of keeping from growing old. I shall see you doubtless on Saturday at the Chamber. The divorce law will be proposed. Apropos of divorces, I announce to you now that of my admiration from yourself.

(To M. de Maupassant). Is this an unmeaning compliment? Be indulgent, it is sincere in the main. You will understand that I should like to say many fine and striking things to you, but it is rather difficult, all at once, in this way. . . . I do not even desire to see you from a distance—your countenance might not please me—who can tell? All I know of you now is that you are young and that you are not married, two essential points, even for a distant adoration. But I must tell you that I am charming; this sweet reflection will stimulate you to answer my letter. I confess in all sincerity. . . the infantile delight given me by your letter, such as it was. Perhaps my mental qualities do not suit you—in which case you would be hard to please; in short, I imagine that I know you (this, too, is the effect novelists produce on weak-headed women of the middle classes). If you need only a vague description to induce you to disclose to me the beauties of your withered and scentless soul, take this: Fair hair, medium height, born some time between 1812 and 1863. And intellectually!—no, I should seem a braggart and you would know at once that I was from Marseilles.

(To the same, later). . . . You are horribly bored! Ah, cruel one! You say this in order to leave me no illusion regarding the cause of your favour of——which for the rest arrived very opportunely and delighted me. In short, for a dull naturalist, you are not stupid, and my answer would be a volume if I did not restrain myself. So then, you are bored, and you look upon everything with indifference, and you have not a spark of poetry in your soul? Do you think in this way to frighten me? I fancy I can see you now; you have a rotund figure, you wear a waistcoat of an undecided colour, too short for you, and with the last button unfastened. Well, even so, you interest me. What I cannot understand is how you should be bored. I myself am sometimes sad, discouraged, enraged, but bored—never! . . . . I have a fastidious appetite. I have small ears, not very well shaped, but pretty; my eyes are grey. Yes, I am a musician. . . . Are you satisfied with my docility? If so, unfasten another button of your waistcoat and think of me when the twilight shades are falling. If not—so much the worse; I think I have given you a great deal in exchange for your pretended confidences. May I venture to ask you which are your favourite musicians and painters?—And how if I were a man?

AMOURS DE VOYAGE.

(To Mdlle.——.) . . . As for serious fancies, I have only had two in my life—the first when I was a child of thirteen, for the Duke of H——. . . . The second was for Count de L——; but it was not at the races that I conceived this fancy for him; at the races the only impression he produced upon me was that of a handsome boy. The day after, when I was at the Toledo with X——, I perceived that he had some style. And at the railway station, when we were leaving Naples, I completely lost my heart. You remember what I said that evening—I fell in love with him the instant I saw him looking in at me through the window of the railway carriage. I cannot describe my sensations; such feelings are indescribable and incomprehensible.

(To her brother, describing a proposal from a Prince.) . . . Instead of answering he looked at me and I saw that his eyes had dark circles under them, and that his forehead was even paler than usual. "I must go away, must I not," he said at last, "and come here no more?" "Why so?" "Because I love you." We then spoke in low tones in order not to be heard by the others, and this lent a sort of tender charm to our voices. I have told you that I love you, and when one loves a young girl there are not twenty ways of settling the question, are there? It can end only in one way or the other. Well, then, I must return no more." "And why?" (I played the innocent.) "Because I suffer too much in coming." Then his eyes filled with tears. There was something childlike and winning in this emotion, but the handkerchief with which he wiped his eyes spoiled everything.

THE EXTERNAL SOU.

(To her brother.)...But this was not until I had washed myself from head to foot, and put on a fine white chemise, a petticoat, and my gray batiste gown, without the bodice, which I changed for a white foulard cape; you know how becoming that is to me.

(To the same.)...I wore a gown of a clinging and elastic material that modestly revealed the outlines of my figure; my hair was dressed a la Psyche, gathered up at the back of the head in a knot of natural curls. Every one said that my appearance was entirely original—coiffure, costume, figure—I seemed a living statue, and not merely a young lady, like so many others. You should be proud, my dear boy, to have a sister like me.

(To her aunt, from Rome) . . . Last night at the theatre there was a young man who looked at me persistently through his opera-glass, like a fool. The young fellow was separated from us only by two boxes, and he changed his place continually to get a view of my face, impatiently waiting for me to lower my opera-glass so that he might look at me, which he did without ceasing during the whole evening: that is to say, from eight o'clock until midnight. The exit is very handsome, and was crowded with men; you pass between two living walls composed of hundreds of persons, just the same as at Nice only that at Nice there are comparatively few people, while here it is a pleasure to go out from the opera. I love those human hedges, those hundreds of eyes fixed upon one. . . .

LEPROSY IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

Like the Jews, lepers were obliged by mediæval law (the Lancet remarks) to wear a special costume. It consisted of a tunic or mantle, called by contemporary French writers housse or esclavin; it was generally gray, sometimes black. A hat, sometimes scarlet, or a hood, was also part of their vestment. Among the articles they were allowed to carry were the wallet, pannier, and the crecelle or rattle, with which they made a noise to warn people of their approach. A provincial council held at Marciac, the 6th of December, 1330, by William de Flavacour, Archbishop of Auch, prescribed to the lepers, as to the Jews, the wearing of a visible sign by which they might be distinguished (Et tam judei quam leprosi signa patentia deferant ut ab aliis discernantur.) What were these signs? At this time of day it is difficult to ascertain them. M. Ulysse Roberts, however, has found in an ordinance issued at Castres, in 1345, that no inmate of the leper hospital there was allowed to enter the town unless he had a drab blanc round his neck and the rattle aforementioned. And not only the lepers, but those in charge of them were bound to wear some such distinctive mark. Louis Guilland, Bishop of Chartres, ordained, March 31st 1529, that the brothers of the Grand Beaulieu, an establishment for lepers, should wear on their dress a capital L of red cloth, half a foot long, over their left breast; and this because they were in frequent contact with lepers, and might communicate the disease.

A Discussion is being carried on between certain Church papers on one side, and musical papers on the other, as to whether the repetition of words usual in anthems and similar works is really profane. "The Church Musician" is very much against the vicar who made the original complaint, and thinks a very slight appreciation of art as an adjunct to religion, intensifying and realising, as it does to a devout mind, acts of praise and prayer, will enable any one to grasp the sense of this repetition of words in sacred music. Still our contemporary admits that cases of extreme difficulty are found now and then. Such cases occur in illustrating dramatic incidents like those in Bach's "Passion," where, for instance, the twelve Apostles asked the question at the Last Supper, "Lord, is it I?" and the composer reiterates the expression; though, as the late Sir George Macfarren puts it, the reiteration "never exceeds what may well be supposed to be the duration of the embodied action, and is "not more often uttered than it may have been on the actual occasion the Evangelist describes."

The conduct of a Roman Catholic priest is the subject of much comment in Hungary. After having been a Catholic priest for twelve years he became attached to a girl, and to marry her left the Catholic Church and adopted the Protestant faith. He lived happily with his wife for fifteen years, and has a child, a girl of twelve, whom he loves devotedly. But now scruples have assailed him, and he could not regain the quiet of his mind but by begging the Pope's pardon and returning to the faith of his fathers. The Pope has absolved him, and his wife will be reinstated as a priest. In the Hungarian Catholic organ, Magyar Allam, he begs pardon of all those whom his perversion offended.

MORE DICKENS LETTERS.

The October Harper continues the publication of the interesting series of letters from Charles Dickens to Wilkie Collins. The letters are exceedingly pleasant reading, the great novelist's ebullient animal spirits breaking out at every turn. Happily there are yet more letters reserved for a later instalment. We extract a few of the more generally interesting passages.

DE GIRARDIN'S CIGARS.

Early in 1856 Dickens was staying in Paris: and he sends to Collins this description of a dinner with Girardin :—

A wonderful dinner at Girardin's last Monday with only one new (but appropriate) feature in it. When we went into the drawing-room after the banquet, which had terminated in a flower-pot out of a ballet being set before every guest, piled to the brim with the ruddiest fresh strawberries, he asked me if I would come into another room (a chamber of no account—rather like the last scene in "Gustavus") and smoke a cigar. On my replying yes, he opened, with a key attached to his watch-chain, a species of mahogany cave, which appeared to me to extend under the Champs Elysees, and in which were piled about four hundred thousand inestimable and unattainble cigars in bundles or bales of about a thousand each.

A ROOMFUL OF TRANSLATORS.

During the same visit he went through the rather fearsome experience of dining with a roomful of his translators.

Yesterday (he writes) I dined at the bookseller's with the body of translators engaged on my new edition—one of them a lady, young and pretty. (I hope, by the by, judging from the questions which they asked me and which I asked them, that it will be really well done.) Among them was an extremely amiable old savant, who occasionally expressed himself in a foreign tongue which I supposed to be Russian, but which my host told me, when I came away, was English! We wallowed in an odd sort of dinner which would have been splashy if it hadn't been too sticky. Salmon appeared late in the evening, and unforeseen creatures of the lobster species strayed in after the pudding. It was very hospitable and good-natured, though, and we all got on in the friendliest way. Please to imagine me for three mortal hours incessantly holding forth to the translators, and, among other things, addressing them in a neat and appropriate (French) speech. I came home quite light-headed.

"CONFUSION TO BARONETCIES."

The following letter, dated from the Ship Hotel, Dover, in April, 1856, seems to refer to his then recent refusal of a baronetcy :—

How I wish you were well now! For here I am in two of the most charming rooms (a third, a bed-room you could have occupied, close by) overlooking the sea in the gayest way. And here I shall be, for a change, till Saturday. And there we might have been, drinking confusion to baronetcies and resolving never to pluck a leaf from the Toady Tree till this very small world shall have rolled us off! Never mind. All to come—in the fulness of the Arctic Seasons.

ART AND PROVIDENCE.

And in 1858 he writes in this way to Collins :—

I do not positively say that the point you put might not have been done in your manner; but I have a very strong conviction that it would have been overdone in that manner—too elaborately trapped, baited, and prepared—in the main anticipated, and its interest wasted. This is quite apart from the peculiarity of the Doctor's [Dr. Manetta—"A Tale of Two Cities"] character as affected by his imprisonment; which of itself would, to my thinking, render it quite one of the question to put to the reader inside of him, before the proper time, in respect of matters that were dim to himself through being, in a diseased way, morbidly shunted by him. I think the business of art is to lay all that ground carefully—not, with the care that conceals itself to show by a backward light what everything has been working to, but only to suggest until the fulfilment comes. These are the ways of Providence, of which ways all art is but a little imitation.

"PLOUGHED" FLIES.

There was nearly always a touch of humour in Dickens's letters to his intimates. Thus he writes in 1861 from Gad's-hill :—

I don't know whether anything remarkable comes off in the air to-day; but the bluebottles (there are nine in this room) are all banging their heads against the window-glass in the most astonishing manner. I think there must be some competitive examination somewhere, and these nine have been rejected.—Ever affectly, C. D. P.S.—I reopen this to state that the most madly despondent bluebottle has committed suicide and fallen dead on the carpet.

THE READINGS.

There are naturally many references to the famous readings. Writing to Collins, he thus sets forth how he fared on some of these reading expeditions, and the effect they had upon himself and other people :—

We have done exceedingly well since we have been out—with this remarkable (and pleasant) incident, that wherever I read twice, the turnaway is invariably on the second occasion. They don't quite understand beforehand what it is, I think, and expect a man to be sitting down in some corner droning away like a mild bagpipe. In that large room at Clifton, for instance, the people were perfectly taken off their legs by "The Chimes"—started, looked at each other, started again, looked at me, and then burst into a storm of applause. I think the best audience I have yet had were at Exeter and Plymouth—at Exeter, the best I have ever seen; at Plymouth I read three times, twice in one day. A better morning audience for little Dombey could not be. And the Boots at night was a shout all through. I cannot deny that I shall be heartily glad when it is all over, and that I miss the thoughtfulness of my quiet room and desk. But perhaps it is best for me not to have it just now, and to wear and toss my storm away—or as much of it as will ever calm down while the water rolls—in this restless manner."

In a letter written three years later he says: "Next night was Nickleby and the Trail. I had had a good walk in the bright air, and time to reason myself up a bit. There was a brilliant audience, and I think I must report of Nickleby that, for a certain fantastic and hearty enjoyment, it tops all the readings. The people were really quite ridiculous to see when Squeers read the boys' letters. And I am inclined to suspect that the impression of protection and hope derived from Nickleby's going away protecting smike is exactly the impression—this is discovered by chance—that an audience most likes to be left with."

CHILDREN'S MANNERS.

It seems to be an accepted fact that the manners of children are not, generally speaking, as good as they ought to be—are not even so good as those of their parents were in the days of their childhood. Some of the letters which have appeared in the Daily Telegraph notably that of "Another Victim," reveal a degree of pertness and open disrespect on the part of young children which to our grandfathers, and, indeed, to all who think that the Fifth Commandment ought to be obeyed, is absolutely appalling.

For boys to speak of their father before his face as "a duffer," for a little girl of four to disobey and rebuke her mother in the presence of strangers without any fear of consequences, shows a want of something besides good, manners. But perhaps the most significant of all the letters that have appeared on the subject is one written by "A Schoolmaster," who boldly asks, "What respect can a lad with high ideals have for the average class of men and women with whom he is brought in contact?" This unfortunate lad has never been taught the Apostolic precept, "Honour all men;" he has never learned the duty of treating his elders with respect, even if their lives do not come up to the standard required by "a lad of high ideals."

Here we see the outcome of that false system of training which proceeds on the assumption that parent and child, young and old, stand on the same platform—that no deference is due to parents or to older people unless, in the judgement of the youngsters themselves, their seniors deserve it.

There cannot be a question that, as some of the correspondents of the Daily Telegraph have pointed out, the bad behaviour of so many children is due to a not unnatural reaction in the minds of their parents against the over-strictness with which they themselves were brought up.

They remember that they stood in awe of their fathers, and obeyed them, but never approached them with love or confidence. Determined to win the confidence of their own children, they allow their little ones to treat them with the utmost familiarity putting their children, in fact, on a footing of perfect equality with themselves; and then they find out that the old proverb, "Familiarity breeds contempt," holds true, and that while fear has been banished, respect has also disappeared.

How can people be surprised that their little ones grow up petulant, greedy, selfish, and domineering, if they have never set themselves seriously to eradicate these faults, and to form in their little ones habits of modesty, obedience, and self-restraint?

It is an undeniable fact that children are born with various dispositions. Some are by nature self-willed and prone to rebellion; others are, almost from the cradle, docile and good-tempered. Now, it seems to us that the root of the trouble about children's conduct is the pernicious and unfeeling notion that the great thing is to bring up all children, whether they are tractable or the reverse, so that they shall not be afraid of their parents. The same sort of discipline will not do for all. It is certainly a lamentable thing to see a boy or a girl suddenly reduced to silence and restraint when the father of the family enters the room. Too strict discipline is not only cruel and hurtful, but it is sometimes productive of results quite as bad as can flow from the lax system of training.

But, admitting all this, it may well be urged that the chief point to remember in bringing up children is, that they shall learn to obey. Without this, that affectionateness and confidence which most fathers and mothers prize so much is comparatively of little use. This may seem a strange thing to say; but it is too often forgotten that children are not committed to our care chiefly in order that we should have pleasure in their company. Children are given to us to be trained; and if we allow them to grow up without learning habits of self-control, without teaching them to subdue their unruly passions and impulses, we simply make bad fathers and bad mothers.—The Lady.

Advice to Mothers.—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

CARLYLE'S UNPUBLISHED LECTURES OF 1840.

The paper read by Mr Karkaria before the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society on Carlyle's hitherto unpublished lectures on the periods of European culture, as preserved by the Anstey Manuscript in the possession of the Society, should (says the Times of India) attract attention at home as well as in India. The lectures, it seems, were not read out, but spoken, and nothing was believed to have remained of them but brief reports in Leigh Hunt's Examiner. "It must ever be a source of regret," says Mr Wylie, in his "Life of Carlyle," "to the students of Carlyle's writings that, while the reporters of the London press were, in that summer of 1838, busy preserving every word of the orations of men who are already forgotten, this poor fragment is all that has come down to us of a series of lectures which would have thrown so much light on the story of Carlyle's spiritual life." It seems, however, that at least two MS. copies of the lectures as noted down by men who heard them are in existence. The one came into the possession of the Bombay Asiatic Library on the death of Mr. Anstey, who took notes himself; to the other, Dr. Dowden, the well-known critic, had reference in the year 1881. The lectures were delivered by Carlyle in 1840. Mr. Anstey, who transferred them to his notebook, will be remembered at home as an able, if eccentric, member of Parliament. He came out to Bombay after his parliamentary days were over, and he is remembered here as an able, if eccentric, barrister, generally at war with the Bench. Mr. Karkaria quotes many instances to show that the Bombay MS. is superior to the Dowden MS. in and much more accurate. In both, oddly enough, the ninth lecture is omitted. The discrepancies are all in favour of the Bombay copy, and fully justify Mr. Karkaria in asserting that our MS. is, so far as can be judged, "a correct and full report of Carlyle's famous lectures." The Dowden MS., however, seems from its very errors to have come from an independent source, and not to have been a mere copy of Mr. Anstey's notes.

AN ISLAND RETREAT FOR BROTHERS.

A lonely and hitherto uninhabited island, off the north coast of Cornwall, is shortly to become the abode of a gentleman whose only companion in his seclusion will be his brother. The island is only two hundred and fifty yards long and sixty broad, is about two miles off the mainland, and about three miles east of the entrance to Padstow Harbour. It is locally known as the "Gulland," from it being the habitat of large numbers of sea-gulls, and is the property of Mr. C. G. Prideaux-Brune, Prideaux-place, Padstow. Being quite exposed to the full fury of the Atlantic gales and tremendous ground seas, it is only in very exceptionally fine weather that a safe landing can be effected on it. The young gentleman who has decided to become somewhat of a recluse is a son of the late General Smyth, commander of the Western District, and it was only very recently, when sailing by "Gulland" in his yacht, that he conceived the strange idea that he would take up his residence there. He has obtained twenty-one years' lease on reasonable terms from the lessor, and has instructed Messrs. William Hendy and Son, Padstow, with an order at once to construct a wooden house 22 ft. by 15 ft., similar to a deck cabin. As soon as the parts of the house are fitted they will be taken to the island with an ample supply of provisions, &c., on the first favourable day, and fixed, so that the occupant may become "monarch of all he surveys" before wintry weather sets in. Already men are actively at work, blasting the rocks so as to get a proper foundation for the house.

MORE RANDOLPHIANA.

Here is an amusing little incident of Lord Randolph's travels which is hardly likely to find its way into the columns of the Daily Graphic. When at Fort Tuli his lordship was invited to an "At Home" given in his honour by the officers of the South Africa Company's police. The entertainment was given on the veldt, as the officers' quarters in the fort are not suited for extensive hospitalities. The proceedings of this open-air function were enlivened by a piano, and the rustic reception-room was encircled by watch-fires.

Lord Raudolph, in responding to the toast of his health, was interrupted by the roaring of savage animals. He turned the unexpected interruption, amid the enthusiastic cheers of his audience, to happy account by laying stress on the indomitable pluck of Englishmen in the spreading of civilization, undaunted by the fierce denizens of the forest. He little knew—although his hearers were in possession of the secret—that the sounds that aroused his enthusiasm proceeded, not from tigers or hyenas or even silver jackals, but from some jovial spirits among his entertainers who were tempted to give their comrades and themselves an innocent laugh at his lordship's expense.

MILLET'S OLD HOME.

Somehow the visitor is not content (says a correspondent of the New York Times). He comes with his soul full of memories or imaginings of Millet, the rough-coated, simple farmer-artist, content to live much as the farmers do, and he finds in the old nest a polite, snug citizen, such as one can see in Paris by the thousand. He expects to enter reverently the old studio, plain and work-manlike, kept just as the master left it, and, if in luck, find there the plain partner of Millet's life in her country dress attending to the simple needs of her family. It is a series of shocks from the time one stops before the cockney gates till one has visited the last of the remnants of what was Millet's house. Yet there was money raised in the United States and France not so many years ago for the express purpose of keeping Millet's house and studio as they were, and of giving to his widow the shelter of the old farmhouse as long as she lived. Mdme. Millet is alive, and a shrewd, well-preserved old lady she is; but she no longer dwells where she supported the uncertainties of lot that befell Millet, where gradually she perceived that a great fame, if not a great fortune, was to be surely hers. Whatever may have been done with the money collected, I have her statement that it was not spent in buying the old place, because the present owners declined to yield their legal claim to it for any consideration. She was thrust out by an officer of the law, and a village feud took the place of that spirit of reverential awe which hangs about the place where a great man has dwelt.

THE PHONO GRAPH AND STREET CRIES

The Folk-lore Society of Massachusetts have sent a delegate to Colonel Gouraud asking his assistance in obtaining records of the "street sounds" of London and the Continental capitals of Europe, to which end Colonel Gouraud has promptly put a phonograph at the society's disposal, and besides a polographer, who will photograph the subjects simultaneously with the phonographing of their "sound waves," thus enabling the coincident reproduction in America and elsewhere of both sights and sounds by means of the lantern and the phonograph combined, and which together will constitute at once most novel and entertaining material for the lecture platform of the future. The Norwood Literary and Scientific Society, of which Colonel Gouraud is president, will probably be the first in England to enjoy this novel and interesting entertainment, which will include, besides the a bove, hitherto unpublished statistics and particulars pertaining to the people whose voices and somtimes picturesque appearance are familiar objects of passing interest to the traveller.

Miss Woolson gives a brief account in Harper for October of the work which is being done to arrest the ruin of the more ancient of the temples at Cairo. A commission has been appointed by the present Government whose duty is the preservation of the monuments of Arabian art; occasionally, therefore, in a mosque one finds scaffolding in place, and a general dismantlement. The work of repairing goes on very slowly; three hundred mosques, probably, out of the four hundred still remain untouched, and many of these are adorned with a delicate beauty which is unrivalled. "I know no quest," writes Miss Woolson, "so enchanting as a search through the winding lanes of the old quarters for these gems of Saracenic taste, which no guide book has as yet chronicled, no dragoman discovered. The street is so narrow that your donkey fills almost all the space; passers-by are obliged to flatten themselves against the walls in response to the Oriental adjurations of your donkey-boy behind: 'Take heed, O maid!' Your foot, O chief!' Presently you see a minaret—there is always a minaret somewhere—but it is not always easy to find the mosque to which it belongs, hidden perhaps, it is, behind other buildings in the crowded labyrinth. At length you observe a door with a dab or two of the well-known Saracenic honeycomb-work above it; instantly you dismount, climb the steps, and look in. You are almost sure to find treasures, either fragments of the pearly Cairo mosaic, or a wonderful ceiling, or gilded Kufic (old Arabian text) inscriptions and arabesques, or remains of the ancient coloured glass which changes its tint hour by hour."

Some interesting details have come to hand concerning the recent achievement of the Canadian Pacific and New York Central Railways in carrying the Eastern mails which reached Queenstown in less than twenty days from Yokohama. One of the new steamers of the Canadian Pacific, the Empress of Japan, covered the distance from Yokohama to British Columbia, some 4,900 miles, in less than ten days. A special train was at once despatched from Vancouver and made the run to Brockville, on the St. Lawrence, a distance of 2,803 miles, in eighty hours and twenty minutes, or, allowing for the difference in time, in seventy-seven hours and twenty minutes. Here the New York Central took up the running, and accomplished the trip from Utica to Albany, 95 miles, in 90 minutes (105 minutes being the time allowed), probably the highest speed ever attained in America for so long a distance. From Albany to New York took two hours and 41 minutes, an average speed of 53·6 miles an hour, and the mails were delivered to the City of New York ten minutes after her advertised time of sailing. The average speed on the Canadian Pacific, across the Rockies and including all stops and delays, was 36·3 miles an hour, certainly a very creditable performance.

A LIBRARIAN'S REMINISCENCES OF EMINENT MEN.

Mr. Robert Harrison, who has been librarian of the London Library for more than thirty-four years, in the course of his presidential address at the recent Librarians' Conference at Nottingham gave some interesting reminiscences of Carlyle and other eminent men who were accustomed to frequent the library:—'The most conspicuously original man among them was Carlyle. He often visited the library. His conversation was most amusing, full of extravagant and exaggerated statements, and always ending with a loud laugh, apparently at himself. He used the library books extensively for his later works, and was guilty of the reprehensible practice of writing on the margins of their books. He must admit that his remarks were never meaningless, but chiefly consisted of corrections of date or errors in the text. One remark of his, however, which was pretty well known, was a criticism. It occurred in Charles Dibdin's collection of songs, the last page of which contained the ordinary version of 'Rule Britannia.' At the foot of this boastful song Carlyle had written 'Cock-a-doodle-do' with a small forest of notes of exclamation after it. (Laughter.) In a case like that the librarian would be a martinet indeed if he effaced from the book an expression so characteristic of the man of genius who wrote it. (Hear, hear.) He hoped they would pardon him for thus dwelling a few moments on the name of Carlyle, if only for the sake of his pregnant saying so interesting to them all—'Why is there not a Majesty's library in every country town? There is a Majesty's gaol and gallows in every one.' Of Thackeray, another eminent member of the London Library, he had an anecdote which they probably had heard before. When writing 'The Virginians' he came to him (the speaker) for a Life of General Wolfe. 'I don't want,' he said, 'an historical account of his career, Lord Mahon's book gives me that, but I want something that will tell me the colour of his breeches. (Laughter.) He had the pleasure also of helping Charles Reade to find materials for his splendid story of 'The Cloister and the Hearth.' The late Lord Lytton was a frequent visitor and inquirer, as was also the author of 'Westward Ho!' and the great novelist known by the name of George Eliot. He was quite astonished at first to see what pains and research were applied to the production of books so easy to read as were their best novels. An illustrious living member of the London Library, Mr. Gladstone, had always taken an interest in their prosperity, and had often given them his valuable support at their meeting. He made use chiefly of their works of reference. He remembered with pleasure a small incident that occurred when 'Juventus Mundi' was going to the press. Mr. Gladstone called to verify a line in Propertius or Ausonius, he forgot which. He told his need to one of the masters who happened to be present. The line was found, and it differed slightly from that which Mr. Gladstone had quoted. 'But,' said the Eton master to him afterwards, 'this line was much finer than the one which we found in print.'"

SIR C. AND LADY HALLE DOWN A GOLD MINE.

An amusing incident occurred at Bendigo recently, when the opulent Mr. Lansel conveyed Sir Charles and Lady Halle down his "No. 222" mine and escorted them around the "Lazarus" and other mines, showing the tit-bits of his famous "Tom Tiddler's Ground." Before descending the shaft, according to gold mine custom, visitors have to assume somewhat fantastic disguises in order to preserve their clothes. Thus in the lower regions, Sir Charles was observed disporting himself in a close-buttoned white canvas shell jacket, baggy white canvas trousers, and rakish-looking larrikin hat; while his ever-stylish wife looked trim despite a blue print cotton frock, a drab felt tennis cap, and an ancient pair of suede gloves. Verily their most ardent admirers would have found difficulty in recognizing them. Interested and edified by what they saw, the visitors quite realized for once that all is not gold that glitters. At the profound depth of 2,000ft. below the earth's surface under other circumstances their situation might probably have appeared weird, impressive, and

IMPORTANT TO ALL.

Especially to Consuls, Europeans generally, and all persons visiting or residing in Hot or Foreign Climates.

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT"

YOU CANNOT OVERSTATE ITS VALUE in keeping the BLOOD PURE; as a means of keeping the system clear, and thus taking away the ground-work of Malarious Diseases, BLOOD POISONS, and all Liver complaints, or as a HEALTH-GIVING, COOLING, and INVIGORATING BEVERAGE, or as a gentle Laxative or Tonic in the various forms of Indigestion, ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" is invaluable.

IT IS THE BEST PREVENTIVE AND CURE FOR

Biliousness.	Sick Headache.
Mental Depression.	Want of Appetite.
Skin Eruptions.	Pimples on the Face.
Constipation.	Vomiting.

SPARKLING AND REFRESHING DRAUGHT.—Notwithstanding its medicinal value, the "FRUIT SALT" must be looked upon as essential as breathing fresh air, or as a simple and safe beverage under ALL CIRCUMSTANCES, and may be taken as a sparkling and refreshing draught in the same way as Lemonade, Soda Water, &c., only it is much cheaper and BETTER, IN EVERY SENSE OF THE TERM, TO AN UNLIMITED EXTENT.

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—After suffering two and a half years from severe headache and disordered stomach, and after trying everything, and spending much money without any benefit, I was recommended ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," and before I had finished one bottle, I found it doing me a great deal of good, an I now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours most truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford, England.

SAVED ME MUCH MISERY FROM FEVERS.—Two years' trial of your excellent "FRUIT SALT" has saved me much misery from colonial fevers, indigestion, and impaired appetite, to which I have been subject during eleven years' residence in the tropics. It is invaluable to travellers as a preventive of sea-sickness and a relief from other ailments. I would as soon think of going a voyage without my tooth-brush as my bottle of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT."—Yours, &c., W. J. B., British Guiana, Dec. 5, 1878.

"Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold,
Ring out the thousand wars of old,

IMPORTANT TO ALL.

What every Travelling Trunk and every Household in the World ought to contain:—A Bottle of

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT,"

A Most Refreshing, Cooling, and Invigorating Beverage.

NO TRAVELLER SHOULD LEAVE HOME without a supply, for by its use the most dangerous forms of FEVERS, BLOOD POISONS, &c., are prevented and cured. It is, in truth, a FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST in the simplest yet most potent form. Instead of being lowering to the system, this preparation is, in the highest degree, invigorating. Its effect in relieving thirst, giving tone to the system, and aiding digestion, is most striking.

IT IS THE BEST PREVENTIVE AND CURE FOR

Giddiness.	Feverishness.
Thirst, &c.	Unnatural Excitement.
Impure Blood.	Errors in Diet.
Heartburn.	Liver Derangements.

PRESERVING AND RESTORING HEALTH.—ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" acts as simply, yet just as powerfully, on the animal system as sunshine does on the vegetable world. It has a natural action on the organs of digestion, absorption, circulation, respiration, secretion, and excretion, and removes all impurities, thus preserving and restoring health.

TO PARENTS.—This preparation is invaluable in the nursery as a gentle laxative; it is pleasant to the taste, and much superior to senna or other nauseous drugs; it corrects the ill effects of over-eating or exhaustion, it is extremely beneficial in any feverishness or heat of the skin. The bowels ought to be kept free by the "FRUIT SALT" for a month or six weeks after eruptive diseases, as Measles, Scarlet Fever, Chicken-pox, Small-pox, and all Fevers or Infectious Diseases, &c.; for its use frees the system of the "dregs."

"THOUSANDS OF MILES IN INDIA."—ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" I have found of the utmost value in the hot and dry seasons, also in the monsoons. I have travelled thousands of miles in India, and in all the various changes of climate I have always found ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" the most refreshing beverage, especially after long heavy marches and other fatiguing duties to which the British soldier of late has been exposed. My dear wife, during her travail, found it to be the most useful thing that could be obtained. Yours, &c., a Warder, Central Military Prison, Poonah. Jan. 30, 1884.

HOT COUNTRIES.—ACIDITY OF STOMACH.—"I have used ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT,' and know it not alone to be excellent, but really invaluable. Especially in the hot countries of the East, where Acidity of the Stomach, Biliousness, and Fevers are so common."—J. M. PHEBLES, M.D., Author of Around the World, Travels in Polynesia, China, India, Arabia, Egypt, &c., &c.

IN CENTRE OF AFRICA WITHOUT ANY MEDICAL MAN.—"Natives came with all manner of diseases. One day we had a man that was said to be mad. Whether mad or not, he was far from well, and I gave him a large dose of ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' The poor fellow came back next morning to tell us that he was better. His breath was no longer offensive, and he looked cheerful. We were sorry when our supply of 'FRUIT SALT' was done; it was a favourite, both with natives and Europeans, and is much used along the malarious coasts."—Africanus, by Rev. DUFF MACDONALD, M.A., B.D., Vol. II., p. 207.

STIMULANTS and insufficient amount of exercise frequently derange the liver. ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver. A world of woe is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S "FRUIT SALT."—"All our customers for ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT' would not be without it upon any consideration, they having received so much benefit from it."—WOOD BROTHERS, Chemists, Jersey, 1875."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you that I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities, namely, it is pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

CAUTION.—Examine each bottle and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a WORTHLESS IMITATION. Sold by all Chemists.

BUSHMILLS WHISKEY is absolutely pure, nothing but the best Malted Barley being used in the manufacture.

Trade Mark.

Take a little trouble to try Old Bushmills. It will be a more serious trouble afterwards to be noted for keeping the finest Whiskey round. To ensure purity it is advisable to get that bottled by the Company, the labels, capsules, and corks bearing their name. A dozen case contains two gallons.

OLD POT STILLS ONLY.

600 Opinions. 600

W. Sinclair Thompson, M.D., F.R.C.S., writes from London—"I have appreciated your old Whiskey very much, and recommend it to my patients."

"Land and Water" says—"Of all spirits, Whiskey is the most wholesome, and one of the finest 'brands' of that spirit I have ever tasted is Old Bushmills."

"The County Gentleman" says—"Connoisseurs giving Old Bushmills a trial cannot fail to appreciate its mellowness and flavour."

"Licensed Victuallers' Gazette" says—"We have sampled specimens of Old Bushmills Whiskey, and are quite of our old friend Captain Mayne Reid's opinion, that it has no superior."

PARIS EXHIBITION.

Edmund Yates,

"His Recollections & Experiences," Vol. I., page 251, says:—

I COULD not afford good wine, and would not give bad; but there was some Irish Whiskey which I procured through Mayne Reid ("BUSHMILLS" was its name), which was highly esteemed.

Writing in the World of Dec. 22, 1886, he says:—

MENTION made, in certain Reminiscences of mine, of a pleasant and wholesome alcoholic stimulant, called "Bushmills Whiskey," has led the proprietors of the famous Distillery to assure me that their alcohol is still extant in its pristine excellence, and, to confirm the assurance, send me a specimen of their produce. "All taps," we are assured by Mr. Stiggins, "is wanity;" but I am glad to find that a favourite "wanity" of my youth is as mellow and as innocuous as when first introduced to my notice by my old friend, Captain Mayne Reid.

The Bushmills Company will be glad to hear from firms who keep their Whiskey, or who wish to keep it, so that their names may be added to this Advertisement if desired.

"This preparation of value is founded upon sound chemical and physiological principles. While pepsine is the natural solvent or digestive for nitrogenous aliments, it has little or no effect upon the feculent constituents which enter so largely into the composition of the food of man; and there is no doubt that some of the disorders of digestion arise from the mal assimilation of the starchy elements. Now the proper digestive for these is diastase; and in the bi-digestive wine, of M. Chassaing, these two most important principles, pepsine and diastase, are combined in suitable proportions."—See THE LANCET, July 27 th, 1872.

ARMENIAN LANE, BOMBAY. MAIN STREET, POONA.

PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE MAKER and TUNER, begs to notify that he will undertake the General Repairs and Tuning of Pianos and other Musical Instruments.

NEW WREST Planks and Actions fitted and substituted for old ones. Pianos now almost useless can be made Good and Useful Instruments at very Moderate Cost. Piano Materials, such as Wires, &c., on hand.

The above Illustration represents the Piano manufactured by Mr. A. Schneider, Bombay, the first and only Piano built in India, regarding which one of the Daily Papers writes as under :—

"A NEW ENTERPRISE.—It is a novel feature in enterprise to see a pianoforte manufactured in India entirely out of material supplied by this country. Mr. A. Schneider, of Messrs. Marcks & Co., has made the first effort in this direction, and with what success will be realized on an inspection of the Instrument. The Cottage Piano, built and owned by Mr. Schneider, is a full Compass Instrument made out of Country teakwood, with a full Iron Frame. The casting of the latter was done in the Civil Engineering College, Poona, from a design furnished by Mr. Schneider, with this exception, every inch of the Instrument has been shaped and put together by him. The Piano has a check repeating action, and a brilliant Tone. These recommendations, coupled with the fact that the whole is encased in plain solid Teak, brings it, in point of Excellence and Durability, on a par with any English Instrument imported into India. We might mention that the Cottage Piano is the fruit of Mr. Schneider's leisure moments, which alone he could desultorily apply towards the completion of his idea. We congratulate the gentleman on the complete success of his new venture, and hope it will prove an impetus to others, whose enterprising proclivities lie in the direction."—Deccan Herald.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, Bart., M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.

"The value of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exanthetic character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many Affections of the Throat and Lungs, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails."

Physician to the Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod Liver Oil, that DR. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S.,
Late Staff Surgeon, Army, Professor of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution, London.

"I found during my Indian experience that the worth and character of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration. The use of 'hydrocarbons' in all debilitated states of the system is now becoming thoroughly recognized; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, rather than from their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of DR. DE JONGH places in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognized."

Author of "Handbook for the Nursery."

"DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is almost a specific in many of the Diseases peculiar to Infancy and Childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use. Patients prefer it to the Pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably."
